Money to Burn.

General John B. Rhett, whose financial scheme of Washington, got very well [illegible] with the Lady of [illegible]. He was born in 1806, graduated at West Point and entered the Mexican war as lieutenant. He was one of Alexander and in the first Bull Run command, afterward [illegible] at West Point. Rhett served as volunteers. He was one of the [illegible] of Cedar Mountain and [illegible] Bull Run. At Chantilly [illegible] as at South Mountain and Antietam. He participated in Hill and Rosecrans' campaign from the Siege of the Wilderness to the overthrow of Richmond. He was [illegible] four times [illegible] for general for gallantry.

The Denver News says: The [illegible] purchase of bonds will be of short [illegible] assistance to [illegible] the stringency of the money market. It succeeds as a remedy that silver [illegible] be used so that all silver shall be in circulation either as coin or as paper representative. But we cannot see how this will help, suppose there were no [illegible] money into circulation. The treasury will have to put it out for some [illegible]. At present its receipts are [illegible] millions a month above its expenditures. This excess has been used in the purchase of bonds but as those are few more bonds that are due, this [illegible] cannot be kept up. There are two ways only that these silver certificates could get into circulation. One would be to let the [illegible] continue about as they do now and reduce the taxes so that the receipts would be [illegible] the expenditures. Another way would be to greatly increase our expenditures without increasing the taxes. The treasury does not give its money away for nothing. So long as the receipts are more than the expenditures there is no necessity to increase the circulation by the issue of silver certificates.

The [illegible] Register in Mexico [illegible] taking [illegible] Collector Sabastian [illegible] Lopez of that [illegible] the patronage in the office which [illegible] was [illegible] Lopez [illegible] a [illegible] was [illegible] by the [illegible] [illegible] that republican [illegible] holding [illegible] the [illegible] administration.
